TO : ACTING DIRECTOR, FBI

DATE: 2/15/73

FROM : [REDACTED] C, NEW YORK (105-123223) (C)

SUBJECT: [REDACTED] TOSHI ALINE SEEGER aka Mrs. Peter Seeger
[REDACTED] IS - CHINA [REDACTED]

ReWFOlet dated, 10/27/72, captioned as above.

Referenced letter has fully identified the subject as the wife of PETER SEEGER, Bufile: 100-200845, NYfile: 100-83801. PETER SEEGER is a well known "Folk Singer" who has shown allegiance to Communist causes for many years.

The indices of the NYO reflect that investigation was previously conducted on TOSHI SEEGER, which reflected that she accompanied her husband on many of his singing tours, but has not entered in any of her husbands interest in left wing groups.

In view of the foregoing information the NYO is conducting no further investigation in this matter.

Peter Seeger brings home Chinese gongs

Among the many things Peter Seeger, one of America's top folk song singer, brought back from his two-and-a-half week tour to China were two Chinese gongs.

'Nowhere else in the world is there a gong like this,' said Seeger as he demonstrated to reporters interviewing him in a hotel lobby. 'In the old Peking opera, this is one of the characteristic punctuation marks,' he said. 'It has a great quality of humour in it.'

China not forgetting own music

While in China, the Seegers—he travelled with his wife and daughter—visited Peking, Shanghai and Kwangchow.

'I am glad China is not forgetting its own traditional music. I have heard many wonderful melodies,' he said. To convince the reporters, he hummed a theme song from the 'White-Haired Girl'. Then he said, half seriously, 'Had Tchaikovsky heard that, he would have used it for a symphony . . . That's one of the world's greatest melody. I think it is an old Chinese folk tune which is adopted for the ballet,' he said.

Another thing which interested Seeger is the attempt made by the Chinese people to combine Chinese traditional music with Western music.

Magnificent synthesis

'The head of the Central Philharmonic Society in Peking, Mr Li Tehlin, is surely one of the world's great musicians. He is trying one of the difficult things in the world, to make a good combination of two different traditions. I heard a magnificent symphony arrangement of 'Shachia-pang' of a chorus of 80 voices, and an orchestra of 80 instrumentalists, with a gong, er-wu, and pi-pa intergrated with European-style symphonic music. This is very difficult.'

Having pointed out that he had seen this kind of blending done badly, he went on to say that Li Tehlin, 'working with many others, made a, I believe, magnificent synthesis.'

While in China, Seeger met about 200 musicians and cultural workers. 'They were interested in learning something about America music,' he said. 'But I had to caution them that I'm only one musician. That it is just like seven blind men and the elephant. They'll just get my side of the story. Then I told them all I knew. I sat with them for several hours, singing songs of Bob Dylan, Joan Baez and many others.'

Peter Seeger

What he will write

Asked if he would write something about his trip, he said he would, particularly about one chemical factory, though he is not a chemist. When asked why, he explained: 'This is a big factory that manufactured chemicals for industrial use. In the manufacture of rayon they used caustic soda. When it first set up, it was polluting the water and the air. They made a bi-product, some chemical in some process, I don't know. And it cost them a thousand US dollars per ton to make it, because they can't sell it for as high a price as it cost to make it. They do it nevertheless. Because they don't want to get the water any dirtier and the air any dirtier.'

The Seegers said that they wanted to come back to China again when they had saved enough money.
